

Rommie Johnson
ISSB Technical Strategy Lead
IFRS Foundation

Rommie Johnson is the ISSB Technical Strategy Lead for the IFRS Foundation. In this role, he shapes and drives forward the organisation's strategy to ensure IFRS Sustainability Disclosure Standards are fit to serve as a core and coherent component of the financial disclosure infrastructure of global capital markets. Previously, Mr. Johnson worked in a variety of strategic operations and policy-focused positions with the Sustainability Accounting Standards Board (SASB) and the Value Reporting Foundation, and as a sustainable finance consultant to companies, investors, and market intermediaries. Mr. Johnson has more than 25 years of varied and often multi-disciplinary business experience with a background in the media industry, entrepreneurial ventures, sustainability, consulting and nonprofits. His experience in project development and finance includes zero-waste biodiesel applications in the restaurant industry, operating models to preserve journalistic integrity in digital-first media transitions, and innovative product-based approaches to unlock health and nutrition through social systems change. Drawing on this diverse background, Mr. Johnson has authored and co-authored an extensive body of influential market analysis, policy papers, and thought leadership. Mr. Johnson earned B.S. and MBA degrees from the University of Florida and holds both the Fundamentals of Sustainability Accounting (FSA) Credential and the Fundamentals of Integrated Reporting certificate
